1. Listing in the calendar of the University.
2. Library privileges deemed appropriate by the chief librarian to that status.
3. Use their former departmental offices as a campus mailing address.
4. A Campus Computing ID (CCID) as deemed appropriate by the dean (renewed annually).
5. Those recreational use privileges to which full-time continuing faculty are entitled.

In accordance with relevant University policy, individuals holding the title of "Professor Emeritus" may be:

1. Entitled to University parking with rates as defined by the Parking Services Fee Structure.
2. Under certain circumstances, eligible to continue to use University equipment following retirement; details are set out in the procedures associated with this document.
3. Eligible for secretarial services related to University-approved activities. Such privileges will be available depending upon the needs and resources of the particular department.
4. Eligible to apply for and hold research grants as defined by the Eligibility to Apply for and Hold Research Funding Policy.

Provision of Space

In accordance with the Space Management Policy, decisions on the provision of space (office or lab) will rest with the dean after consultation with the chair.

While no professor emeritus has a right to office or laboratory space, there will be some occasions where the provision of such space would be of mutual benefit to the individual and the University of Alberta. This is to recognize that professors emeriti have many skills which can, to the degree they wish, contribute to the mission of the University.

Deans will endeavour to ensure consistency of space allocation, recognizing that space availability varies from building to building and department to department.

For further information on space usage, consult the Space Management Policy.
